

Staff Specialist, Gynae-Oncology

Western Sydney LHD

Dear Colleague,

Thank you for your interest in learning more about the exciting opportunity available as a Staff Specialist in the Department of Gynaecological Oncology at Westmead Hospital.

At Westmead Hospital, we take immense pride in the delivery of exemplary patient care to a diverse population, with a strong commitment to clinical trials and cutting-edge research.

Western Sydney Local Health District is renowned for its comprehensive range of public healthcare services, and Westmead Hospital, as the principal referral hospital for Western Sydney, plays a pivotal role in providing highly specialised services. As a member of our team, you will be part of the busiest public gynae-oncology unit in the state, with a collaborative and dynamic multidisciplinary team dedicated to clinical excellence.

We are searching for a team player who will join us to enhance and maintain our exceptional service. We are confident that your skills, passion, and dedication will make a significant impact on our department and, most importantly, on the lives of the patients we care for.

Westmead Hospital is a teaching hospital of Sydney University and as such, is involved in the teaching and mentoring of medical students. We are also an accredited training site of the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists, for both obstetric and gynaecology registrars, and for two accredited Gynaecological Oncology fellows. One of the key aspects of your role will be in mentoring and nurturing the next generation of medical professionals.

Your role as a Staff Specialist will encompass a wide range of responsibilities, from delivering high-quality patient care to participating in research projects and engaging in clinical practice improvement projects. Your commitment to evidence-based medicine principles is essential. There will be opportunities to engage in translational research with our well-established and internationally recognised translational research team, as well as opportunities to engage with the peak gynaecological oncology clinical trials group in Australia (ANZGOG).

To succeed in this role, you are expected to possess exceptional clinical skills, teaching abilities, and a collaborative approach. Experience in clinical research, including clinical trials, and/or education and training, will be invaluable.

In addition to your clinical expertise, you should meet certain requirements, including registration with the Medical Board of Australia and Fellowship of the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (RANZCOG) or equivalent. A broad experience in gynaecological oncology, commitment to teaching and supervision, and dedication to quality improvement, patient safety, and risk management are highly valued.

For more information, please see the additional information enclosed within this briefing microsite.

To learn more about this exciting opportunity, please contact our advising consultants:

Laurence Sims laurence.sims@alumniglobal.com - Principal Consultant 0456 789 856

Sarah Curran – sarah.curran@alumniglobal.com - Researcher 0474 229 087

We eagerly anticipate your contributions to our mission of providing exceptional care, advancing medical knowledge, and making a positive impact on the lives of our patients.

On behalf of myself and the executive team, we thank you for your interest and look forward to receiving your applications and meeting you in due course.

Yours sincerely,

Alison Brand AM
MD MMed FRCS FRACOG CGO
Clinical Professor, University of Sydney
Director, Westmead Centre for Gynaecological Oncology